(Nashville, TN) The Tennessee Tribune newspaper has named District Attorney General Glenn Funk ‘Man of the Year’ for 2014. In announcing its selection, the Nashville newspaper praised Funk’s commitment to diversity in the District Attorney’s Office since his election. Funk was elected Davidson County District Attorney in May, 2014. He calls the Tribune recognition a tremendous honor from one of the most respected leaders in our community. “Rosetta Miller Perry’s contributions to Nashville make this honor even more significant for me. I appreciate not only her acknowledgement but also the work she continues to do to make Nashville a great city for everyone.” Funk said.
